

DVR Questions

How many hours can I record on my DVR?

The size of your DVD's hard drive and type of programming will determine how much you can record. For instance, a DVR with a 120GB hard drive can record up to 80 hours of standard-definition TV but only 20 hours of HD programming.

How many programs can I schedule to record onto my DVR in the future?

You can schedule as many recordings as you want-within limits. Most DVR models are able to record two programs at the same time. You can also only record based upon the available space left on your hard drive.

Can I watch one show on TV while I record another on my DVR?

Yes!

How long can I keep my DVR recordings?

As long as you like, but space is limited by the size of your hard drive.

When my DVR hard drive is full, will the DVR automatically delete my recordings?

Only if you have your settings configured that way. You can ensure that certain recordings aren't deleted by designating that those programs can only be deleted manually.
